LINDH MISION

LINDH's mission is to redefine the way of working in humanities from innovation and technologies in the framework of the new information society. LINHD wants to give a new approach to research, making it collaborative and team-based, interdisciplinary, without barriers, and based on innovation and exchange of ideas as a source of enrichment through a flexible and adaptable system to the needs of the person and the moment.

LINDH wants to respond to the growing needs that the new modes of knowledge transmission are imposing. To this end, LINHD offers solutions for the development of research projects and infrastructures both at an individual and institutional level. It supports researchers and teachers who wish to work and train in Digital Humanities, and companies, institutions and organisations that have the need or desire to adapt to new changes and trends in technology applied to the humanities, from the systems traditionally used in the library field or in the field of information science, to the latest visualization and semantic web technologies.
